NAMKECHENMA:

A DREAM OF GURU CHÖKYI WANGCHUK

By Guru Chökyi Wangchuk

Emaho!<sup>1</sup> There was a yellow scroll of the profound inventory of Orgyen Pema's [enlightened] mind-treasures,<sup>2</sup> extracted by Dragpa Ngönshe<sup>3</sup> at Samye and given to Pön Jam[alwa]. On account of past aspirations and karmic fortune, a person likened unto me, I, Chökyi Wangchuk, received it from the hands of one of his posterities.

On the third day of the first autumn month in the hot season of Black Water Snake year, as I was relying upon [the yellow scroll], I found a supplemental inventory<sup>4</sup> of [enlightened] mind-treasures at Drak Namkechen ("Crag with a Ladder to Heaven"). Then that night in a dream there was this woman<sup>5</sup> mounted atop a yak amidst a tribe of yak-herding nomads.

She proclaimed, "There's not even a trace of folly<sup>6</sup> in you; this I know!" and she left.

Then,<sup>7</sup> the next night at dawn, I dreamed that at the bottom of a wide road rested a cave,<sup>8</sup> sizeable with a door of iron, where a black man with braided hair sat<sup>9</sup> on a gray stag.

"What are you doing here?" I enquired.

He rattled and tossed his large locks behind him, then touched his finger to the cave.

"Here are inexhaustible<sup>10</sup> belongings, that your ancestor<sup>11</sup> prepared for you,"<sup>12</sup> He rejoined. "I entrust them to you,<sup>13</sup> so do look after them." Having uttered this, he mounted a black bull and soared into the west.

While I was wondering, "Should I unseal the entrance with its iron door?" A-Mamo, who was younger than before, appeared. While spinning a large key<sup>14</sup> overhead, she pronounced:

"Skillfully use this<sup>15</sup> to open the door,
And you who have nothing [449] will be wealthy!<sup>16</sup>
The ocean<sup>17</sup> of milk surges, fish<sup>18</sup> gather—
Taking<sup>19</sup> a measure of food and drink is crucial."

Having said this, she entrusted the key and departed. I consequently understood this to be the meaning of the lineage of the ḍākinī's seal of entrustment.

Quickly I opened the door to the cave and out popped<sup>20</sup> a garuḍa-like<sup>21</sup> bird. Five-colored<sup>22</sup> flames blazed from its mouth, promptly burning my body.<sup>23</sup> However, by manifesting my mind<sup>24</sup> into the Great Compassionate One,<sup>25</sup> I mounted the garuḍa-like bird<sup>26</sup> and took off into the sky.<sup>27</sup>

Above the nine levels of rainbow clouds,<sup>28</sup> or the thirteen heavens,<sup>29</sup> in a pavilion of rainbow light<sup>30</sup> sat<sup>31</sup> a crystal<sup>32</sup> child, in the attire<sup>33</sup> of Vajrasattva.<sup>34</sup> He conferred empowerment utilizing a vase full<sup>35</sup> of nectar. After pouring it into my mouth,<sup>36</sup> there appeared a white A in the heart of his clear and lucid crystal body. In the center of his left eyeball was a white A, and in the space before was a white A. His bodily form then gathered into the A in his heart; the A in his heart amassed into the A in his eye; the A in his eye subsumed into [450] the A in the space [in front]; the A in the space [in front] dissolved into my heart,<sup>37</sup> causing a natural radiance, devoid of grasping,<sup>38</sup> to arise.

With the vase full of nectar, I roamed carrying it in my hand, and somehow, I found myself atop a giant throne. I gave nectar to the sixteen “sons”<sup>39</sup> and the eight<sup>40</sup> “daughters.” I distributed nectar to the assembly<sup>41</sup> of monastics,<sup>42</sup> mantra practitioners,<sup>43</sup> and male and female yoga practitioners.

At that moment, the woman with the cowrie headdress grabbed it from my hand and said, “Their share of those over there<sup>44</sup> has been missed.” Having given bountiful alms, I gazed over, and the entire place was filled with a massive crowd in disarray.<sup>45</sup>

At that time, I woke up and considered this a very good auspicious connection, and I retrieved the great [enlightened] mind-treasure from Namkedrak. When I met with the glorious Vajrasattva, he bestowed The Stainless Crystal Garland: Pith Instructions for the Four Empowerments. But since fortunate ones were so few, the symbols dissolved into the center of my citta.

As such he said.

1 The dream unfolds at the locale of Namkechenma, known as “a place with a ladder to heaven.”

2 “[Enlightened] mind-treasures” is rendering thugs gter. However, it should not be conflated with the later treasure classification of “mind treasure,” rendering dgongs gter.

- 8 A1: 448.4 interpolation: gter gnas ("treasure location"), signifying that it is not an ordinary cave.
- 9 A1: 448.5 interpolation: gter bdag klu bdud ("the nāga-demon treasure lord"), clearly describes the black man. This qualifier is not attested in The Great Treasury History, A2: 123.6: mi ngag po ral pa shab se ba 1 zhon nas 'dug pa la. He is, however, not only extant in Guru Chöwang's outer biography, The Eight Chapters (skabs brgyad ma), A1: 22.7: gter srungs (B1: 31.3: srung) klu bdud mgo dgu pas ("the nine-headed nāga-demon treasure guardian"), but is a prominent character in Chöwang's treasure narrative.
- 10 A1: 448.6: spyad 'phro med pa ("will not be consumed however much one uses it"). Although the text does not literally read "inexhaustible" (mi zad pa), the translation was compressed into inexhaustible.
- 11 A1: 448.5 interpolation: ayan chenos ("Great Orgyan"). B2: 101.10: mes po o rgyan chen pos. A2: 123.7: mes pos, excludes o rgyan chen pos variants. A1: 23.1, B1: 31.6: mes po chen pos.
- 12 A1: 448.6 interpolation: chos dbang la ("for you Chöwang").
- 13 A1: 448.6 interpolation: gter bdgis rgya bkrol nas ("after the treasure lord unraveled their seals").
- 14 A1: 448.7 interpolation: kha byang ("inventory").
- 15 A2: 124.1: 'di. A1: 448.7 interpolation: thabs shes ldan pas ("as it has the means," or "as it possesses method and wisdom").
- 16 A1: 449.1 interpolation: dgos 'dod 'byung ba'i thuD gter dang 'phrad bas ("because you will encounter the [enlightened] mind-treasure that fulfills all needs and wishes").
- 17 A1: 449.1 interpolation: mnag zab mo'i ("profound pith instruction").
- 18 A1: 449.1 interpolation: las can gyi skyes bu ("beings with the karma").
